About the ENVIROTHON

The Delaware ENVIROTHON is an education program for high school age students that introduces them knowledge and practical skills in aquatic ecology, wildlife, forestry, soils and land use, air quality, public speaking and a “current issue” that changes every year. The program culminates in a ‘day-in-the-field’ competition where students conduct hands-on investigations in these environmental topics.

Since 1996, it has provided students throughout Delaware with an integrated approach to learning about natural resources. The program also tests their creativity, analytical thinking, and team building skills. The State Champions move on to participate in the international NCF Envirothon Competition.

Sponsoring the ENVIROTHON is a chance to engage the next generation of natural resource and environmental professionals, and to foster a lifelong stewardship ethic in participants. The knowledge gained through the program creates a lasting appreciation for natural resources and stewardship that will stay with the students, whatever their future career path.

The Delaware ENVIROTHON runs entirely on the generosity of our sponsors and donors. Your support ensures that the program remains free for students to participate!
